President's Message

by Randall Wall

I just finished watching the Ken Ham/Bill Nye Debate Part II. After facing off against each other on the podium three years ago, Bill Nye decided to take Ken Ham up on his invitation to visit the Ark Encounter last July.

For two hours they toured this giant replica of Noah's ark said to be built to the same size specifications stated in the Bible. It's quite a sizable building and yet the ark was supposed to be built by eight people, one of which was over 500 years old. (I learned from reading the Answers in Genesis webpage that supposedly Noah had his first son at 500. Talk about putting off starting a family!)

Of course, soon came the sparring over whose view had the most evidence, scientific evolution or creationism.

Humanism is an ethical philosophy that derives its principles from science and reason rather than theology. It asserts the worth and dignity of every person, advocates personal liberty tempered by social and environmental responsibility, and promotes democracy, compassion, and justice. It sees human beings as natural organisms, whose values arise from culture and experience and holds humanist responsible for its own affairs.

Ham kept insisting that his conclusions differed from Nye's simply because of different assumptions and different interpretations used in each of their respective methods.

As it went on, Ham kept raising the same objections over and over! It was maddening! So apparently, the only difference between the results of an international, professional scientific endeavor that arduously and meticulously examines evidence from dozens of different disciplinary viewpoints and arrives at the same conclusion is nevertheless equivalent to the view where a magical being had a guy in boat that could not have been built, save every species on Earth it couldn't have held from a massive flood of which there isn't enough water to make so that we would finally learn our place, which we didn't! Got it!

April Speaker Meeting - Health Optimization -

With over 25 years of health optimization experience Brent will be sharing his story of being the only one in his immediate and extended family to change the trajectory of poor health and disease to a vibrant healthy life. He will share the secrets and benefits he has discovered along this journey.

Brent has been a gym owner, fitness trainer, taught Qigong and breath work, coached people on nutrition and the power of smoothies, and facilitated wellness retreats. He is now an ardent supporter of a whole food plant based eating program.

Board Meeting April 2017

Due to the last Board Meeting being canceled, the board will meet after the Speaker Meeting on Saturday, April 22nd at the Special Collections Library.

AHA Joins Group to Express Concern about Judge Neil Gorsuch - Excerpt

www.americanhumanist.org, March 16, 2017

The undersigned national faith-based and nontheistic organizations, including secular, ethnic, and community-based groups, share a commitment to individual liberty and the separation of religion and government — two of the tenets on which this country was founded. We are united in our serious concerns regarding the nomination of Judge Neil M. Gorsuch to the United States Supreme Court.

Judge Gorsuch's decade-long record on the federal bench, as well as his writings, speeches, and activities throughout his career, demonstrate that he is a judge with an agenda. His frequent dissents and concurrences show he is out of the mainstream of legal thought and unwilling to accept the constructs of binding precedent and stare decisis when they dictate results he disfavors. If confirmed to the Supreme Court, which is closely divided on many critical issues, Judge Gorsuch would tip the balance in a direction that would undermine many of our core rights and legal protections. He lacks the impartiality and independence the American people expect and deserve from the federal bench.

President Trump outsourced the selection process of a Supreme Court justice to the ideologically-driven Federalist Society and Heritage Foundation. Never before has a president so blatantly curried favor with partisan organizations for a Supreme Court nomination. In addition, as a presidential candidate he pledged to appoint Supreme Court justices who would overturn Roe v. Wade. Litmus tests in judicial selection subvert the most critical qualities of a judge: open-mindedness and independence.

In a 2005 article published in the conservative National Review, Judge Gorsuch wrote, "American liberals have become addicted to the courtroom, relying on judges and lawyers rather than elected leaders and the ballot box, as the primary means of effecting their social agenda on everything from gay marriage to assisted suicide to the use of vouchers for private-school education. This overweening addiction to the courtroom as the place to debate social policy is bad for the country and bad for the judiciary." Throughout our nation's history, the federal courts have been a critical bulwark in ensuring the rights and liberties of all Americans, especially minority groups whose numbers mean they have less influence at the ballot box. Judge Gorsuch's hostility to the valid use of courts by victims of discrimination in all forms to enforce their rights under the US Constitution and federal law demonstrates his ideological agenda and has been reflected in his decisions during his decade on the bench.

Erosion of the Establishment Clause

As a judge on the Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit, Judge Gorsuch has written or joined dissents that would dramatically weaken the Establishment Clause of the First Amendment. In American Atheists, Inc. v. Duncan, a panel of three Republican-appointed judges ruled against the Utah Highway Patrol Association's construction and maintenance of a series of 12-foot crosses on public land near roads to memorialize deceased officers, explaining that the crosses had the "impermissible effect" of appearing to endorse the Christian religion. Judge Gorsuch wrote an opinion for himself and several other judges that dissented from the decision of the full court of appeals not to rehear the case. Gorsuch asserted that the "endorsement" test should not be applied, and criticized the "reasonable observer" standard that the circuit court used to determine that the crosses were religious symbols. Judge Gorsuch wrote that the intent of the person who displayed the religious symbol weighs more than the impression that such a symbol leaves on the person who views it. The Supreme Court denied review of the case; Justice Thomas alone wrote a vigorous dissent, making some of the same arguments as Judge Gorsuch.

In Green v. Haskell County Board of Commissioners, another case involving Christian symbols on public property, a three-judge panel of all Republican-appointed judges concluded that an Oklahoma county's decision to approve the construction of and maintain a Ten Commandments monument on its courthouse lawn violated the Establishment Clause. Judge Gorsuch again wrote an opinion for himself and other judges that dissented from a decision by the full court of appeals not to rehear the case. He argued that the court should not expect that a reasonable person would infer a religious endorsement when a government official appearing in that capacity appears and/or speaks at a religious unveiling ceremony. As the panel decision explained, however, the endorsement test remained the law in the Tenth Circuit (and elsewhere), and the monument clearly had the “primary effect of endorsing religion.” The Supreme Court denied review of the case.

Religious Views Imposed on Women’s Health

Judge Gorsuch has written or joined opinions that would restrict women’s health care, including allowing religious beliefs to override women’s access to birth control and defunding Planned Parenthood. In Hobby Lobby Stores, Inc. v. Sebelius, he signed on to an opinion allowing certain for-profit employers to refuse to comply with the birth control benefit in the Affordable Care Act. Citing Citizens United v. FEC, the decision held that corporations can be “persons” with religious beliefs and that employers can use those religious beliefs to block employees’ insurance coverage of birth control. In Little Sisters of the Poor Home for the Aged v. Burwell, Judge Gorsuch dissented from the majority’s decision approving the accommodation in the birth control benefit that allows non-profit employers to opt out of the benefit but makes sure the employees get birth control coverage. Judge Gorsuch joined a dissent that argued the simple act of filling out the opt-out form constitutes a substantial burden on religious exercise. In Planned Parenthood Association of Utah v. Herbert, Judge Gorsuch dissented from the majority’s decision to keep in place a preliminary injunction that stopped the state of Utah from blocking access to health care and education for thousands of Planned Parenthood’s patients. If the policy had gone into effect, it would have cut off access to an after-school sex education program for teens and STI testing and treatment for at-risk communities.

Rejection of Aid-in-Dying

Judge Gorsuch wrote a dissertation that rejects laws that provide aid-in-dying to terminally ill persons. He calls such laws “assisted suicide” and wrote “all human beings are intrinsically valuable and the intentional taking of human life by private persons is always wrong.” However, Gorsuch declined to discuss capital punishment or death during war, saying those issues brought “unique questions.” The Supreme Court upheld Oregon’s death with dignity law in 2006, explaining that “[r]ather than simply decriminalizing assisted suicide, [the Oregon law] limits its exercise to the attending physicians of terminally ill patients[.]” Now six states and the District of Columbia permit aid-in-dying. Judge Gorsuch wrote that such aid-in-dying laws would “tend toward, if not require, the legalization not only of assisted suicide and euthanasia, but of any act of consensual homicide” including “sodomasochist killings, mass suicide pacts, duels, and the sale of one’s own life.” In Oregon, where aid-in-dying has been closely researched and studied for more than a decade, there have been no reports of any such instances. Judge Gorsuch’s position denies terminally ill individuals basic human dignity at the end of life, and it is not his role as a judge to make personal medical decisions for a patient.

The Supreme Court is the final arbiter of our laws, and its rulings dramatically impact the lives and rights of all Americans. We urge all senators to carefully examine Gorsuch’s nomination. They must fully exercise their “advise and consent” responsibilities by engaging in a thorough review of Judge Gorsuch’s record and judicial philosophy. The Senate Judiciary Committee must engage in full and fair hearings in which all requested documents are produced and examined, committee members are permitted to adequately question Judge Gorsuch and receive full and complete answers, and enough outside witnesses are permitted to testify regarding Judge Gorsuch’s record. Before the full Senate considers acting on the nomination of Judge Gorsuch, the American people have a right to know precisely how his confirmation to the Supreme Court would impact their rights, freedoms, and liberties.
